

Every result, traced back to the source. That is the whole point.

AI-assisted research across 25 jurisdictions, with every result cited to primary source.

The problem

In-house tax teams spend hours a week chasing down primary source material: OECD commentary, domestic legislation, treaty text, across whichever jurisdictions a group operates in. Most of that time is not analysis, it is retrieval. That is expensive time for a senior person to spend, and it does not get faster as the group grows into more jurisdictions.

What it delivers

- Searches across 25 tax jurisdictions and 1.5M+ indexed source paragraphs, and growing.
- Every result cited back to the specific source passage, not summarised without a trail.
- Built for the retrieval and pattern-matching step, so a qualified person spends their time on judgement, not searching.
- Runs as a SaaS solution or inside your own environment, with no licence fee for an in-house tax function; an advisory firm licensing it for its own fee-earners is quoted a subscription in writing.

Built by people who have lived within the tax domain, not handed to a separate team that has only read about one.

Who it's for

Group Tax Director, Head of Tax, Senior Tax Manager or anyone on an in-house tax team who currently loses hours a week to primary-source research across more than one jurisdiction. Especially relevant where Pillar Two, cross-border structuring or multi-jurisdiction compliance means the team touches source material outside its home country regularly.

TaxLex surfaces source material and citations. It does not provide tax advice. The tax treatment stays with your qualified adviser, a treatment that is theirs to set, not one we have taken for them. The user is responsible for verifying every cited source and forming their own conclusion. AI-generated output can be wrong or incomplete, so review every result against the cited source before relying on it.

The tools described here are provided as a working aid. You remain responsible for reviewing every output before you rely on it. Nothing here is a substitute for advice from a qualified tax adviser in the relevant jurisdiction. The tools are provided as is, without warranty, and their use is governed by their terms of use.
